Subject: re ashby farm barn

Hi Sally

I have had a meeting with Historic England science team and the agent for the application and we have agreed a post decision plan of action for the dating of the barn. All sounds good so hopefully we can approve. In our discussion we were thinking it could be added into the architectural recording condition or as a stand alone condition but if you want help with wording let me know.

“Following the clearing out of the timber framed barn of all materials other than the fixtures, fittings and built fabric the construction works shall be paused and access shall be provided to the Historic England Scientific Team/ their contractors to undertake dendrochronological dating of the barn. This shall be undertaken in conjunction with the relevant bat consultant to ensure the safety of this protected species. A copy of the final report shall be deposited with the local authority in pdf format within 12 months of the sampling being undertaken. Should dating not prove scientifically feasible the local authority shall be informed in writing immediately.”

What do you think
