

The floor plan illustrates a symmetrical two-story residential building. A central staircase serves as the core, with a Corridor (Cpd) branching out to the rooms on both sides. Each side contains a Living room, Kitchen, Bathroom, and two Bedrooms (Bed 1 and Bed 2). The layout is mirrored across the central axis.

A line drawing of a two-story house. The house has a gabled roof with a central ridge. The front facade features a central entrance with a small porch supported by two columns. There are six windows in total, arranged in two rows of three. The windows are rectangular with double panes. The house is shown from a front-facing perspective, with a dashed line indicating the ground level.

This is a line drawing of a house's exterior elevation. The house features a gabled roof with a small dormer window on the left side. The main body of the house is rectangular with a chimney on the right side. There are four windows: two small square windows on the upper floor and two larger rectangular windows on the lower floor. The drawing is a simple line art representation with no shading or color.

This is a black and white architectural elevation drawing of a two-story house. The house features a gabled roof with a small dormer on the left side. The front facade has a small porch on the left side, which is supported by two columns. There are several windows: a large multi-paned window on the left side of the porch, a smaller window to its right, and a larger window on the right side of the house. The drawing uses simple lines to represent the structure and shading to indicate depth.

This is a line drawing of a building facade. The building has a gabled roof with a wide overhang. The main body of the building is rectangular. On the left side, there is a small, multi-level structure that appears to be a porch or a set of stairs. The facade features four rectangular windows arranged in a 2x2 grid. On the right side, there is a small, square structure that looks like a chimney or a small tower. The drawing is done in a simple, clean style with black lines on a white background.
