

This is a black and white architectural elevation drawing of a house. The main structure features a steep gable roof covered in blue tiles, indicated by a grid pattern. A brick chimney with two small square openings at the top is positioned on the left side of the roof. The main body of the house has a light-colored, possibly white, facade. On the left side of the main facade, there is a small, narrow vertical window. In the center, there is a larger arched window with a double-pane design. To the right of the arched window is a small square window. Further right, there is another narrow vertical window. The right side of the house features a flat-roofed extension, which appears to be a porch or a smaller room. This extension has a simple gabled roof structure on top. The entire drawing is rendered in a clean, minimalist style with clear lines and no shading.
